Employer Feedback Analysis Report

These are the recommendations made by the companies who are listed below.

- The most recent updates should be included in every course's curriculum, and students should be educated of them.
- Encourage the students to use articles from national and international publications to help them learn and comprehend the subject material.

At the departmental level, the employer feedback is examined, and appropriate actions are then made. Additionally, the IQAC meeting covers curriculum feedback suggestions, which are then examined at the institutional level for every programme and the necessary steps are then taken.

Conclusion

One of the most important factors in the growth of the teaching and learning process is the curriculum, which necessitates a regular, ongoing assessment system. To ensure that our institute's students receive a world-class education, all stakeholders must provide feedback based on need or meet certain expectations.
